FACE LIKE A BURN

Bloody Water Oozed Out Constantly. No Peace Day or Night. Doctors Failed. Cured by Cuticura.

Lychild's disease, which was the worst kind of Eczema, started on one cheek like a ringworm. It spread and itched so the poor little fellow had no peace night or day. Then it started on the other cheek and chin, until all were raw as a piece of beefsteak, like a burn where you would rub off the skin, and bloody water oozed out constantly. His sufferings were terrible I know, although he was but six months old and could not tell how he suffered. I tied his hands that he would not scratch, then he would rub his poor little cheeks on his shoulders to relieve the intense itching. I had as good a doctor as was in Philadelphia, but he failed to relieve him. I read of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and at once purchased them. Strange to say that very night he rested without scratching his face, and from that on he improved and soon was entirely cured. I would like anyone suffering from this terrible disease to see my boy, who is to his twelfth year now. His complexion is as clear and smooth as can be. This is an unsolicited testimonial, and every word is true. I thank God for my child's recovery, and I thank the manufacturer of CUTICURA.

Distress Is Its Best Hold.

A political party is certainly in a bad way when the hope of its future success depends upon the distress of the country. This is the disgraceful plight of the Republican party. Its political interest requires a continuance of the business depression and for that reason it is doing all it can to protract the industrial distress and prolong the suffering of the people.

Their excessive protection and licentious financial methods having been the cause of the "calamity," which they are now trying to turn to political use, the Republicans were lucky in getting out just in time to escape being caught while in power by the avalanche of business ruin which they had started on its way, and they are tricky enough to claim that because it began to sweep over the country about the time the Democrats took charge of affairs it came from a Democratic cause.

Such misrepresentation has naturally had its effect upon thoughtless people, and furnishes the only hope which the Republicans have of retrieving their political fortunes by deterring the Democrats from bringing on an improvement of the business situation by the passage of a Democratic tariff bill. For this object they are throwing obstacles in the way of tariff reform and doing their utmost to continue and increase the distress which they are using as political capital.

But what a miserable commentary on the party of which it can be said that the only chance it has to recover its lost political control is by continuing the prostration of business and prolonging the distress of the people.—Bellefonte Watchman.

Coxey's Army.

The "army" of Coxey, the Ohio crank, and of Brown, the sage-brush lunatic, is not likely to take up as much space on the earth as it has in the newspapers, yet it is quite likely that there will be more or less of an army collected, and that Washington, if the army gets that far without disbanding, will soon be well filled by the "unemployed," not, however, by men who want work, but by thugs and tramps who, like the buzzards, see a feast from afar and are not particular as to what it is so they may get a share of it.

Coxey's army has not yet begun to gather, at least in great numbers, at Massillon, and it is not likely that it will. The particular patriots that he is likely to call together are not the kind to march to Washington. That is too much like exertion. Some peripatetic individuals may meet him at Massillon, but these will not walk long. The "army" will from time to time be joined by bands of patriots along the line of march, but these too will not remain in an intact body. In fact the probabilities are the close body of the army will be composed of comparatively few men, while the majority will ride on freight trains whenever possible and make it possible to live on the fat of the land by forcing contributions of money or provisions from all who are met on the way. All of this will happen if Coxey and his army march from Massillon:

At the first sign of disturbance the army ought to be dispersed. While the right which Coxey says he wants to exercise is undoubtedly that of every man to enjoy—the right of petition—the exercise of that right, if it entail public disturbance, must be suppressed. If a large body of men could do what Coxey talks of doing, without destroying the peace, nobody should disturb them, no matter how chimerical their ideas. But Coxey's people are not likely to be orderly. They are more likely, if there be any of them, to be the other kind.

A crowd of disorderly persons becomes more disorderly the longer they escape arrest. Every sheriff of every county through which this army will march, if there be any army to march, must be wide awake and arrest without hesitation every man who is disorderly. As the governor says the sheriffs must perform their duty.—Patriot.

Shabby Ingratitude.

An incident occurred in the House of Representatives the other day that showed Republican gratitude in a very unfavorable light.

When Representative Grow came to choosing a seat he found one on the Republican side of the House which, although eligibly situated, was vacant. No member belonging to that party was willing to occupy it for the reason that the next one to it was filled by a colored member. Whatever repugnance Mr. Grow may have had to being so near a "nigger," he overcame it, and took the seat which all his white Republican brother Congressmen had shunned.

But look at the shabbiness of the treatment to which the black Republican has been subjected by the other Republicans scorning to sit near him. Consider its ingratitude.

What would their party be without the negroes? If it was not for them it would be beaten by over a million in the general vote of the country. It would not have elected a President in the last twenty years. It would be beaten in half a dozen close Northern States which the colored vote enables them to carry. The advantage of that vote gave them the slim majority in Congress that enabled them to pass the McKinley tariff, and, in short, if it was not for the negroes their party would be a helpless and hopeless minority.

Yet notwithstanding this fact, when a colored constituency in the South, for whose alleged protection the hypocritical old party has been demanding force bills, sends a colored Representative to Congress his white Republican colleagues refuse to sit near him, and the seat remained vacant.

A NEW law relative to the state board of medical examiners has gone into effect. Section 14 of the act provides that from and after the first day of March, 1894, no person shall enter upon the practice of medicine or surgery in the State unless he or she has complied with the provisions of the act and shall exhibit to the Prothonotary in the county in which he or she desires to practice medicine or surgery a license duly granted by the State board. After exhibiting the license and upon payment of one dollar the applicant shall be registered.

Heroes Among Our Laborers.

The courage and devotion which kept a band of rescuers at work in the Gaylord shaft for nearly a month in hourly peril of life and limb was rewarded at last by the discovery of only the decomposed bodies of the buried comrades whose lives they hoped to save. Futile as the labor proved, it was of the kind that must always command the respect and admiration of mankind. The days of heroism have not entirely passed away, and it is one of the commendable features of modern heroism that it is displayed more frequently among the lowly toilers than elsewhere. The men who worked day and night to rescue the imprisoned miners alive from the Gaylord shaft deserved to succeed, and it was certainly no fault of theirs that they did not. Now that the bodies of the entombed victims have been reached there should be a searching investigation into the cause of the accident, and the negligence, or worse, which cost thirteen lives, should be laid at the proper door.—Times.

The Friday Superstition.

Much ridicule has been poured on thirteen clubs, Friday clubs and other associations formed for the laudable purpose of dealing in a practical and pleasant way with current superstitions. General Wolseley, who in a pretentious military criticism included Dessaix, the hero of Marengo, among the generals who accompanied Napoleon to Russia, has written a flippant letter to a thirteen club in London to say that he loves to cherish the pretty superstitions of his childhood. Against this false sentiment it must be said that some of the current popular beliefs are positively mischievous in many respects.

Not a transatlantic steamship company has Friday among the days of departure, and until quite recently none of the coastwise steamship lines had put the unlucky day on its list. It would be highly desirable for the ocean mail service that some steamships should leave Atlantic ports on Friday, but while the owners are doubtless exempt from any superstition on the subject they are obliged to defer to an absurd popular notion. Else they would be apt to find a very small passenger list and might possibly experience some difficulty in obtaining a crew. Railroad statistics show that there is less travel on Friday than on any other secular day of the week. Experienced travelers are so well aware of this that they sometimes do not take the trouble to secure a Pullman ticket on Friday, as they are pretty sure to find an empty berth.—Philadelphia Record.

An Imported Farm.

"I once saw," said Bertram Reynolds, of Boston, "an imported farm, the soil as well as the products being absolutely foreign to the surroundings. This was in one of the coldest parts of Manitoba, where I was entertained by a family which had retained its love for milder regions and crops. The bill of fare was necessarily meager, but some of the vegetables were so bright and green that I could not help asking how they were preserved so well. To my surprise, I learned that they were cultivated in a garden patch or a miniature farm, the soil of which had been brought from warmer regions so as to insure a fertility not found in the region of ice. The vegetables themselves had been grown from imported seed, and owing to the care and protection they had had they were a perfect luxury. The expense of conveying the soil in barrels such a long distance would prevent any but comparatively wealthy people from trying the experiment, but my friends had made it a hobby. The only other case of earth importing that I have met with is that done by the shah of Persia. The traditions of his country prevent his treading on foreign soil, and when he makes a trip in foreign nations his attendants carry a supply of Persian soil, some of which is placed in his shoes, a practice which accounts for the great inconvenience walking always appears to be to his majesty when abroad."

Conquered the Cactus.

The conquering of the cactus in a little Mexican town on the south bank of the Rio Grande furnishes a gentleman of Dallas with inspiration for the following: "In this particular town there was a good sized church with a flat roof. A large number of cactus seeds had lodged in the moss on the roof of the church, and in the course of time there was a big crop of cactus up there. Now, it is the custom when they want to destroy this thing to first burn off all the thorns, and then the cattle will eat the plant. The people became tired of seeing the plant on their church, and a mass meeting was called to devise some means of getting rid of the thing. After deliberating for some time a man was hoisted to the roof and after three days' labor had burned the thorns from all the stalks. A cow was then hoisted to the roof, and in about a week there was nothing left on the roof but the cow, which was lowered to the earth again. The people were delighted with the result and now point with pride to their church."

Cobwebs and Cuts.

The cry of modern surgery is for chemical cleanliness, and the deluded man or woman who binds a small poultice of microbes, otherwise cobwebs, over a fresh cut as a healing agency is a candidate for Bloomingdale. Pressure will stop the bleeding, if it is not arterial, and will help that. Whether an artery has been tampered with or not is shown by the way the cut bleeds. A pumping flow or a steady spouting stream indicates that it has. Press firmly while the nearest physician is summoned. For ordinary cuts, even those which bleed profusely, firm pressure right upon them will soon check the flow.

Then wash them thoroughly in clear hot water, draw the edges together and put strips of court or surgeon's plaster across.

Strips should be used instead of a single piece to afford vent for pus that should gather. The washing is especially necessary when the cut is made by glass or tin, lest any bit of foreign material remain in the wound to fester.—New York Times.

GLADSTONE, in addition to $500,000 left him by his father, has a rent roll of the Hawarden estate, which came into the possession of his wife on the death of the last male Glynne. Added to royalties and his annual income is $125,000 a year.

IF you're picked up a crooked stick, don't tell every one so.

JOBY PAID HIS FARE.

The sun had set, but the lower edges of the wild, stormy looking clouds massed in the west were still aglow with vivid, crimson fire. In the east the gray gloom of the coming night was mounting up to the sky, and here and there a pale star already glimmered in the dusk. A brisk wind, or what sailors call "a half gale," was blowing, and the waters of the English channel were breaking in short, angry waves, of deep green in the hollows, and snowy white where their crest curled and spouted in hissing foam. Far off to the southward a dim, bluish line, which only the experienced eye of a seaman could have recognized as land, marked the coast of France, while in the opposite quarter the chalky headlands of England gleamed faintly in the fading twilight.

The stout ship Falcon, leaning gallantly to the wind, was making her way down the channel, bound for America. The sails had been reefed, the cables coiled, and everything made snug for the night. Captain Essex, pleased, as an old sailor always is when his vessel is well away from the dangers of the land, and making good progress under a steady wind, paced to and fro on his quarter deck, gruffly humming a little song, the greater part of which was lost in his thick, bushy beard, though now and then you might have caught some words, as "The sea is the place for me, my lads," or "A lively ship and a willing crew."

Captain Essex's little song was interrupted by a sudden commotion in the forward part of the vessel. There was a sound of loud, angry talking, a hasty scuffling of feet, followed by the frightened sobbing of a child.

"Hello!" exclaimed Captain Essex, "what is the meaning of that row?"

"A stowaway on my ship!" growled the captain. "Bring the rascal here! We'll give him a taste of the rope's end first, and then—but what is that?"

"The stowaway, sir," was the response as two of the crew approached, leading between them a very small and very ragged boy.

The anger in the captain's face gave place to a look of astonishment, mingled with pity, as his eyes rested upon the shivering form of the intruder. But he maintained the sternness of his tone as he addressed the boy.

"Well," said he, "what are you doing here?"

"N-nothing, sir," was the trembling reply.

"Who are you, and where did you come from? Speak up, now! No nonsense!"

"I'm Joby—Job Oliver, sir," said the boy, between sobs, which he vainly endeavored to choke down. "I live in London by the docks, sir."

"What are you doing here, then?"

"I—I hid away down below, and—and they found me. I wasn't doing anything. I didn't touch a thing. I thought they wouldn't mind. I'm not very big, you see, and I don't weigh much."

He broke down with a gasp and pressed his small, grimy fists into his streaming eyes. Then, as the captain remained silent, but continued to gaze at him with a tremendous frown, he made a brave effort to go on with his story.

"I haven't any mother or father, you see, and I have to earn my own living. Everybody says: 'He's too small. What's he good for?' and they don't take me, though I am strong. I can lift a trunk—a little one. I can run errands very fast, but everybody says, 'Oh, he's too ragged and too dirty.' If I could get jobs, you see, I could get me a new suit of clothes, and everybody don't want me, and——"

Here a fresh storm of sobs shook the small frame.

"But you haven't told me yet what you are doing on board this ship!" said the captain, preserving his severity with an effort.

"The ship was going to America," answered the boy. "Everybody is rich in America. Everybody wants you there, you see. Tom Dixey went there, and he makes a load of money."

"That's all very well," responded the captain, "but people who go to America pay for their passage, and to hide away so as to go without paying is just the same as stealing so much money. Don't you know that?"

Evidently the boy had never taken that view of the question. He looked up at the captain's stern face with a frightened and startled expression. Then he began a hurried search in the pockets of his ragged jacket. From one he drew forth two coppers, from another a silver sixpence and from a third a shilling, much battered, chipped and defaced. These he held out toward the captain.

"This is all I've got now. I earned the sixpence and the two pennies—the shilling a gentleman gave me. It's broken, but it is good silver, all the same."

"And what am I to do with these?" asked the captain.

"To pay my fare," replied the boy "It's most enough, I think. I will earn the rest soon, when I get over there."

The good captain could maintain his gravity no longer. A smile lighted up his rugged features as he said kindly:

"There, there, Joby, keep your money, my boy. You are an honest little fellow, after all. You shall stay with me on the Falcon, and we will make a man of you. How will that suit you?"

Joby was delighted, of course. The sailors who are wonderfully handy at such things, devised a suit of clothing for his small body. He speedily became a great favorite with the crew of the Falcon, proving himself to be active and intelligent, and, what is far better, absolutely honest and truthful. The captain had grown very fond of Joby, and as for Joby—well, it was not long before everybody on board knew what Joby thought of the captain.

The Falcon, which was a sailing vessel, had met with headwinds constantly since leaving the channel, and on the fourth week out was struck by a heavy gale from the northeast. All day long the good ship labored with the mountainous waves, leaping and plunging till it seemed as though the groaning, creaking masts must come out of her. But she was a stanch, well built craft and had passed safely through many a worse tempest.

With the fall of the night, the gale increased in violence The sails had been reduced to the heavy lower canvas, just sufficient to steady the vessel. The captain remained on deck, taking a position near the rail, where he could keep an eye on the rigging. Near him, sheltered by the bulwarks, sat little Joby, on a coil of rope.

At first the noise and confusion, the thunder of the water, the shriek of the wind through the cordage, and the wild pitching of the ship had frightened the boy. But when, by the light of a lantern near by, he saw the captain's face he felt relieved and rather enjoyed the excitement of the storm.

Suddenly, just as the captain was shouting an order through his trumpet, a vast billow seemed to rise out of the gloom and bear down upon the ship. It struck the vessel's side with an awful roar, throwing tons of water on the deck. Before he could save himself the captain was lifted from his feet and flung overboard into the sea.

Almost at the same instant a small figure was seen to leap upon the rail, cling there a moment, and then leap outward into the darkness and disappear.

"Man overboard!"

The terrible cry rang above the roar of the tempest. For a moment all was panic and confusion. Then, under the mate's command, the ship was rounded to, with her head to the wind, and a boat ordered to be lowered.

"No, use," said one of the men to the mate, who stood by the rail near where the captain had fallen overboard, "we could never find them in the daytime, let alone such a night as this."

"I am afraid not," answered the mate sadly. "Poor old man! Poor boy! Hark! What was that?"

"Falcon, ahoy!" The shout came long and strong from the darkness, not 20 yards from where the ship lay.

"The captain!" cried a dozen glad voices.

"Belay your jaw there, ye lubbers! Tail on that line and haul us aboard, or we'll be adrift."

Line! Us! What could he mean? But the mate had already discovered a curious thing—a light but strong rope, fastened to a ring in the bulwark and extending outward in the darkness toward the spot whence the captain's voice proceeded. It was drawn tight, as if some heavy burden were towing at the end of it.

In an instant sturdy arms were pulling at it with a will. Then a stout rope was lowered, and up it, like a monkey, scrambled Joby, followed more slowly by Captain Essex.

Then a great cheer went up, drowning the roar of the storm itself, as the crew gathered about the dripping forms of the captain and his little friend. A few words served to explain what had happened.

Joby, with his eye on the captain, had seen him carried overboard. He knew that one end of the coil of light though strong rope upon which he sat was secured to the bulwark, for he had tried the knot himself that very day. Without pausing to think of his own danger, he took the free end of the rope between his teeth and was in the water nearly as soon as the captain himself.

Though he could swim like a duck, he was borne helplessly along on the crest of the waves almost into the arms of Captain Essex, who caught him as he was sweeping by. The captain fastened the line about both of their bodies, and partly swimming and partly towed by the ship they had managed to keep their heads above the water until the Falcon was hove to.

The storm blew itself out during the night, and the next morning dawned clear and calm. All the forenoon Joby was observed to be very grave and silent, as if he were pondering some important question. Finally he presented himself before the captain in the cabin.

"Well, my boy," said the captain, "what can I do for you?"

"A man's life is worth a good deal of money, isn't it?" asked Joby, twirling his cap nervously as he spoke. "Not a boy like me, but a grown man."

"Yes, of course, my lad," replied the captain. "A man's life is supposed to be the most valuable of his possessions."

"Well, then," said Joby, twirling his cap still more nervously, "they say I saved your life last night. I don't say it was much, you see. Any fellow who can swim could do the same, only I happened to do it."

"Yes, you certainly did it, Joby. And what then?"

"You see—you see," stammered Joby, "I—I thought that would pay for my passage. Then it wouldn't be stealing, you know."

Joby could not make out why the captain's honest eyes should suddenly grow moist, nor why the captain's right arm almost squeezed the breath out of his small body, nor yet why the captain's voice should be so husky as he said:

"Joby, my lad, while old Tom Essex's hulk holds together, and a single timber of him floats, you shall never want for a berth or be without a friend."—London Tit-Bits.

Misplaced Charity.

"One of the most amusing cases of misplaced charity," said C. L. Brock, "was one on Samuel C. Cupples, of this city, or at least it is told upon him, and I believe it to be true. One day a woman appeared in great distress and told him that her husband had died, she had procured a cheap pine coffin, but could not bury him, and her children were starving. He went with her to the house, and the sight that he saw was worse than imagination could have pictured. The pine coffin was there, containing her husband; the children were there, crying for food; the cupboard was empty. The wealthy philanthropist could not bear the sight, and placing in her hands what money he had in his pocket, no inconsiderable amount, by the way, he beat a hasty retreat. After he had gone a short distance he missed his gold headed cane, and recollecting that he had left it in the widow's room he went back after it. The man had emerged from the coffin and was engaged in counting the money when Mr. Cupples entered. Not a word was said upon either side, the cane was procured, and the philanthropist went his way.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Took Only the Top Rail.

It was during the year of '61 that a Virginia farmer complained to Col. Webster that the soldiers were destroying his fences.

Col. Webster replied that his men had to have something to burn and suggested that the farmer allow the troops to remove only the top rails.

This compromise seemed to satisfy the farmer and he agreed. In a few weeks, however, he rushed to the colonel in a great passion.

"See here!" he thundered. "Your men have burned up every stick of my fence!"

"I am sorry," was the calm reply.

"But didn't we agree that they should take only the top rails?"

"We did; and we have stood by the agreement."

"Then how is it my fences are all gone?"

"You must study that out for yourself," replied the colonel. "My men have continued to help themselves. I can assure you that each time they took only the top rail."—Boston Budget.

A Russian Fairy Tale.

Once upon a time there lived a mujik who went about complaining of the burdens of misfortune he had to carry all the time. One day he happened to stumble upon a cave in which lived a wise old man. When the wise old man heard the mujik grumbling about his fate, he upbraided him.

"I would like very much to have a look at these burdens which we all have to carry," said the mujik. "Very well," answered the wise old man. "Come to my cave at midnight of the first day of Maslianitza, and I will show you all the burdens of the world."

So away went the mujik, and he thought the time went by very slowly until Maslianitza (butter week) came, and then you may be sure, he was on hand at 12 o'clock, sharp. Sure enough, the wise old man was there, and he took him by the hand and made the sign of the cross upon him and blessed him "Voi mia Otza, sina i Sviatova Dookha" (in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost), and then he took him into the cave.

There the mujik saw a number of sacks. "What are they?" he asked. "These are our burdens," was the wise man's answer.

So the mujik began to try them all. Some were very large and some very small. In many cases the smallest ones were heavier than the largest. They were all heavy, however, and uncomfortable. Finally the mujik happened to pick up one large bag, which was very soft, and when he flung it on his back he was delighted to feel how nicely it adapted itself to his shape. It seemed rather light too.

"Now," exclaimed he, "if one could only have a burden like this to carry instead of the sort I have life might be worth living."

"Fool!" exclaimed the wise man, "this is your very own burden."

Sure enough when the mujik looked there was his own name upon the burden. So he meekly took his departure and grumbled no more.—Chicago Post.

Where Snow is Red.

Snow is sometimes found in polar and Alpine regions, where it lies unmelted from year to year and the annual fall is small, colored red by the presence of innumerable small red plants. In its native state the plant consists of brilliant red grobules on a gelatinous mass. Red snow was observed by the ancients, a passage in Aristotle referring to it, but it attracted little or no attention until 1760, when Saussure observed it in the Alps and concluded that it was due to the pollen of a plant. It was also noticed by the arctic expedition under Captain Ross on Baffin's bay shore on a range of cliffs, the red color penetrating to a depth of 12 feet. Less frequent is a green growth on snow.—Ladies' Home Journal.

What Some Wives Have to Bear.

A stout, pleasant faced woman got into a Harrow train at Baker Street station, followed by a man with gray hair and close cropped mustache and a dyspeptic expression.

They sat on the sunny side of the carriage. The man relapsed into a gloomy silence. The woman looked around the carriage and tried to be cheerful. "Cold, isn't it? she observed.

"What?" growled the man.

"Rather cold."

"Where?"

"Here."

"Well, I suppose you can stand it."

The woman took the man's sourness as if she was used to it. After a bit she said, "What pretty flowers!"

"What?" growled the man.

"I said what pretty flowers."

"Where?"

"At the house we passed."

"Well, what of it?"

Five minutes later she said, "Isn't that a nice baby?"

"What?"

"Isn't that a nice baby?"

"Where?"

"There," pointing to a beautiful little boy on the opposite side of the carriage.

"Looks like a fool."

It was Sunday. A peal of bells could be heard while the train stopped at a station.

"That's nice music," said the woman.

"What?"

"That's nice music."

"Which?"

"Why, those chimes."

"Sound like a lot of cowbells."

"BIG turkeys don't sell worth a cent this year," said a commission merchant as he gazed sorrowfully on a number of monsters which he was vainly trying to sell for a good price. "No one wants such large birds except a few of the restaurants and hotels. Most people want small, plump turkeys weighing not over 10 or 12 pounds apiece. A few years ago these large ones were sought, but not now. We have to sell these for several cents per pound less than we get for the small ones, and then they sell very slowly." The moral of this is that small turkeys are the ones for our farmers to aim for. Those that mature early. The Mammoth Bronze are not ones to fill the bill.—Rural New Yorker.

On last Tuesday, at a meeting of the York County Democratic Committee, the following resolutions, among others, were adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that the present method of making Democratic nominations in this district, giving to each county three conferees, no less and no more, without regard to population, wealth or Democratic votes, is unfair and unjust to this county.

Resolved, That the people be requested to consider in advance of the county convention, and in the selection of delegates to that convention, whether or not they desire the convention to instruct their conferees to lay before the conferees of Cumberland and Adams, to be by them submitted to the Democratic conventions of their respective counties, a plan providing for a Congressional convention, in which each county shall have one delegate for each five hundred or one thousand Democratic voters, together with the statement, that while York county, realizing the political value of every seat in Congress, and the extreme importance of harmony in the district at this time, freely concedes to Adams county the nomination for the ensuing term, under the present rotation in office, she nevertheless appeals to the justice of her sister counties for a better and fairer system of nominating, to take effect only when York county shall be entitled to the nomination in due rotation.

Resolved, That, should the people favor such a change, any change, it should be matured at this time and formulated by the convention of this year, so that our Democratic brethern of Adams and Cumberland may have ample time to consider the question, on its intrinsic merits, undisturbed by any immediate controversy about the succession, and instruct their future conventions accordingly.

The resolutions contain a clear utterance in reference to whom the next Congressional nomination shall be given. Adams is conceded her right, which is a graceful and proper recognition of the system in vogue in this district. Adams county is entitled to name the nominee for the 19th District, and she has abundant and excellent material from which to choose.

The resolutions also declare for a change in the present system of rotation and propose a system of representation according to vote. The system now in practice is the most just and equitable that can probably be invented. If Adams and Cumberland do possess fewer Democratic votes it does not follow that their material is inferior or that they will not give as able and active representatives as their larger sister. This, however, is a question to be determined by the counties in joint conference, when a solution will be reached.

At the meeting an election of a County Chairman brought about a vigorous fight. Josiah Peeling, the old Chairman, was re-elected by a vote of 109 to 55 over Henry Neater, who was said to be the candidate of Mr. Beltzhoover, who has his eye on Adams county's turn. The recent developments in York would seem to be a fatal blow to the ambition of Mr. Beltzhoover, and insure Adams her right.

A LETTER from the pen of our esteemed friend, Rev. Dr. E. J. Wolf, in answer to an article which appeared last week will be found in another column.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, March 23, 1894.

Editor of Compiler: President Cleveland has devoted the greater part of this week, night and day, to listening attentively to arguments for and against the Bland coinage bill, although it is known that he has long been a close student of the question involved. It is because of the differences in opinion among Democrats on the matter that he has been anxious to hear all that both sides have to say. Up to last night he had not indicated what disposition he would make of the bill. In view of the record of the President it is a waste of space to say that there is absolutely no foundation for the stories sent out from Washington making him a party to a bargain with the silver men in Congress. They are simply sensational libels upon the President as well as upon the silver men. No man ever occupied the White House who was clearer of bargaining, either for personal or political gain, than is Grover Cleveland, and, while his decision must necessarily be against the wishes of many good Democrats, it can be set down in advance that it will be the result of his honest convictions, and there is little doubt that it will be so accepted by the Democratic party at large.

Since the tariff bill was reported to the Senate the Republicans have been making desperate and concerted attempts to make it appear that there is formidable Democratic opposition to the bill in the Senate. That the bill will be changed before it passes the Senate is altogether probable, inasmuch as it will profit no one in its present form, according to the latest estimates, something like $30,000,000 more than will be required, and it is the policy of the Democrats only to levy sufficient taxes to raise the money necessary to run the government. Democratic Senators who favor changes looking towards a reduction of the revenue to the amount required will state their reasons and ask their Democratic colleagues for their votes to make them, but it is not believed that any of them will seek Republican votes to get those changes, or will vote against the bill should the changes desired not be made.

The four appropriation bills—the District of Columbia, the general pension, the fortification and the sundry civil—already passed by the House, represent a reduction of $24,384,958 from the total amount carried by the same bills for the current fiscal year. This shows that chairman Sayers and his Democratic colleagues on the House appropriations committee are carrying out Democratic ideas of economy in public expenditures.

The successful trial of the thirteen-inch cannon made at the Gun Shop of the Washington Navy Yard, which was made this week, at the proving grounds, a few miles down the Potomac river, marks an epoch in the history of fine gun making in the United States, besides establishing the wisdom of the Government in making its own guns. Secretary Herbert and distinguished party numbering several hundred were present at the trial. Experts pronounce it one of the finest guns ever made.

Representative Breckenridge is now having his inning in the sensational trial by Miss Pollard's suit against him for breach of promise of marriage. He denies in toto the main charges against him, and if the evidence to be submitted by him sustains his denial, as his friends believe it will, he may succeed in getting a verdict, notwithstanding the terrible testimony of the defendent.

Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, is dangerously ill. He was this week stricken with paralysis, and his physicians have little hope of his recovery.

Coxey's Army is regarded in Washington as a sort of All Fools day hoax pulled off a little too ripe, and nobody has the remotest idea of making any preparation for its reception, for the very simple reason that no one believes it will ever come in any such numbers as its originator now talks about so glibly. For the Compiler.

A Lutheran Answer.

The contagious power of example has a striking illustration in the last issue of the COMPILER. The Lutherans have found a good deal of amusement in the stalwart attempts of the Presbyterian Editor of the Star and Sentinel to run the Lutheran church, and now as if unwilling to have his paper in anything behind its enterprising neighbor, the Reformed Editor of the COMPILER takes a bold hand in the same business.

In one respect the COMPILER shows an improvement on its teacher. The diatribes of the Star usually give rise to the question, Where on earth does it get its information? for it is incredible that this should be manufactured in its office. The COMPILER candidly and very properly refers to its source, namely, a speech from Congressman Harter. The Editor does not claim to have heard the speech, but, forsooth, read a report of it in a Baltimore paper. He does not stop to ask whether a newspaper report of a religious address is want to be accurate, and he has of course not inquired of Mr. Harter whether he recognised his own speech in print? Possibly, too, the observation of a certain gentleman high in the esteem of the COMPILER as well as in the government of the nation, about the mendacity of newspaper reporters, has escaped his attention or his memory.

So accepting Harter as the inspired oracle of the Lutheran church and a Baltimore reporter as the one exception to his profession, the COMPILER tells its readers that the Lutheran body is "a conglomerate mass of discordant atoms," "almost hopelessly divided," "torn with dissensions," "like a ship at sea without a rudder," &c., &c. And it declares finally and here it speaks editorially—"This condition of affairs in their church is no doubt unknown to a large body of the laity, but such is the condition." Here is at least one item of truth in this extraordinary deliverance: "This condition of affairs is unknown to a large body of the laity," and, it should have been added "to the great majority of the clergy also."

But happily this ignorance is about to be dispelled. The density of Lutheran darkness relative to the deplorable condition of the Lutheran church must yield to the penetrating rays of light which the Presbyterian and Reformed Editors of the Gettysburg press are shooting into the opaque mass. What a happy Providence it is that the principal Lutheran institutions are located in this luminous centre, where professors and students can gain information to be found no where else on the planet.

Without venturing as a Lutheran ignoramus to offer any information to the COMPILER, the writer may be permitted to state that lamentable as is the condition of the Lutheran church, according to the COMPILER, the United States Census reports show that between 1880 and 1890 its rate of increase was nearly 50 per cent. larger than that of any other denomination. And he also promises that if the COMPILER will tell its readers which of the large denominations of this country have less division and less dissension than the Lutheran, he will agree beneforth to take all his Lutheranism straight from its columns.

Truly yours,
E. J. WOLF.

CASTORIA is truly a marvelous thing for children. Doctors prescribe it, medical journals recommend it and more than a million mothers are using it in place of Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, so-called soothing syrups and other narcotic and stupefying remedies. Castoria is the only safe, reliable thing to regulate the stomach and bowels and give healthy sleep the world has ever seen. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, quiets pain, cures diarrhœa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms, and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mother's friend.

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA HAS CURED OTHERS WILL CURE YOU

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. Papa was taken sick and that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk. Because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I have my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. Mc., Nercatur, Kans.

Locating the N. G. Camp.

The division encampment of the National Guard will be held at Gettysburg, commencing August 3 and continuing eight days. This was decided on Wednesday by Adjutant General Greenland after a visit to the famous battlefield in company with Colonel Schall, of the Sixth regiment, acting commander of the First brigade; Gen. J. P. S. Gobin, of Lebanon, Major J. F. Foster, Bellefonte, Capt. Bricker, Harrisburg, Lt. W. F. Richardson, Philadelphia, and others connected with the State Guard.

The division headquarters will be located where they were when the encampment was held here ten years ago. One of the brigades will pitch its tents in the rear of Cemetery Ridge, which was occupied by a portion of Lee's army during the battle; the other in the neighborhood of the Emmitsburg road and the third in the woods occupied by Pickett's division before the famous charge on the third day of the fight. The brigade officers will select their positions later. The Third being the oldest has the first choice, then comes the Second.

Water for the use of the troops will be carried to the camp through pipes. The railroads centering in the town will increase their facilities so that transportation of the troops shall not be delayed. The people of Gettysburg have promised to assist the division officers in making the affair a success.

General Greenland estimates the cost of the encampment at $175,000. The division encampments which have been held at Mt. Gretna cost about $20,000 a day, including the pay of the troops and transportation. He says the cost of transportation for the next encampment will exceed that of the former division encampments by at least $15,000.

New Oxford Jottings.

Rev. P. E. Heimer, of the Reformed church, preached a sermon in his church to the Fireman of this place, on Sunday evening week. The church was filled to overflowing and the discourse was listened to with marked attention. The subject was fire from beginning to end—very good and appropriate.

Services on good Friday evening, in the Reformed church, The Crucifixion illustrated, by the Rev. P. E. Heimer. Easter services on Sunday afternoon by the Sunday School.

The Lutheran choir held an entertainment in Livingston's Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings for the benefit of the choir; and at sunrise, Easter morning, a praise service, and at 9 o'clock Easter service, topic: "What is Christ's life doing for you?"

The M. E. church held their Easter service on Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. All of the services were interesting and appropriate for the occasion.

There has also been held in the Catholic church services every day and evening in the week, of interest and profit to all present. O.

PRENDERGAST RESPITED.—Chicago, Ill., March 22—Patrick Eugene Prendergast, the slayer of Carter Harrison will not be hanged to-morrow (Good Friday). Judge Chettain, at 11.30 to-night, ordered a stay of execution until April 6, in order to have the condemned man's sanity tested.

Most extraordinary efforts were put forth in behalf of Prendergast to-day. The Supreme Court having yesterday refused a supersedeas, a writ of habeas corpus was asked last night from Judges Wood, Brown, Jenkins and Seaman, of the Federal Bench, but they to-day decided that they had no jurisdiction.

Then the question of sanity was raised and application made to Judge Chettain. Meanwhile an attorney applied to Acting Governor Gill for a stay of execution, but at a last hour last night Gill refused to interfere. Then Judge Chattain intervened, with the result that Prendergast gets two weeks more of life.

SPRING summons the cyclist, athlete and sportsman, to renewed pleasures and triumphs, and Outing, rife with all that pertains to healthful recreation, echoes the command. The April number, with its wealth of illustrations, presents a seasonable picture of outdoor sport and pastime, and is make doubly attractive by strong fiction by noted pens. It contains a complete story, 'Let No Man Put Asunder," by Annetta Josefa Halliday, "Hilda's Rice," by H. F. P., and "My Adventure with a Lion," by Herman Rave.

THE SOLDIERS' ORPHANS' SCHOOL.—John A. Bergen & Son, of Lancaster, have been awarded the contract to construct the administration building of the proposed industrial school in Franklin county at $76,-936. As $12,000 was paid for the site of institution, there remains of the State appropriation about $51 000, which will be more than sufficient for the construction of the other buildings required.

Farm News and Views.

THERE is no necessity for keeping animals in a very fat condition unless they are to be sold immediately. The thriftiest animals are those that are compelled to take some exercise, and which are in moderate condition. Very fat animals are subject to disease, and also suffer severely from the heat in summer. It has long been known that cows, sows and mares have failed to breed when too fat, and the value of males is lessened when they are overfed and made very fat.

BRUSHING the hide of the cow should be the rule, but the filth that gets on her side is due to not keeping the stalls clean with fresh bedding and plenty of it. When the bedding is put out in the sun to dry, in order that it may be used the next night, it is economy that does not add to the health of the animals or the comfort of the stalls.

GRASS will grow anywhere that a good crop of weeds will thrive, and if land is liable to be overrun with weeds, a crop of Hungarian grass will crowd out the weeds and destroy them.

WORN-OUT land requires at least two or three years for restoration, and it will cost something to bring it back to fertility. When land has been cropped for years, until it is no longer capable of producing a crop, the plant food cannot be replaced in a single season.

ANALYSIS of soils proves nothing, as no two square feet of ground will give the same results. A shovelful of manure, placed on a spot five years ago may cause that portion of the field to give different results than a portion but a few feet away. The best way to test land is by observation of the effects of manures or fertilizers on different crops.

HABIT has much to do with success on the farm. Some farmers are Bourbons, who learn nothing, but adhere to old methods, forgetting that the world has progressed, and agriculture revolutionized, while they have followed the same course marked out for them by their fathers in the decades gone by.

IOWA has passed a law compelling her farmers to eradicate the Russian thistle. Laws for the destruction of all kinds of weeds would aid the farmers. The farmer who allows weeds to grow and mature seeds is a menace to the community, and entails expense on all who adjoin him.

MANY an innocent farmer has seeded down a good crop of weeds when sowing clover seed. It requires labor to keep the clover field clear of weeds and to clean the seed. No one can put clean clover seed on the market and sell it cheap, as the cost of the labor must be secured. Farmers should examine seed carefully before using.

POOLS of water in the pasture do not supply the cows with cool, fresh, clean water. If no stream runs through the pasture, put up a wind-mill and have water supplied to troughs with pipes.

THE weights of the corn and cobs and that of the fodder grown at the same time differ but little. A crop of 50 bushels of shelled corn (with the cobs) will weigh about 3,800 pounds, and the weight of the fodder will be about the same.

THE horseman who said "there are two quarts of oats in the curry comb and four in the brush," evidently believed in grooming the horse.

GOOD butter is one of the things that is always in demand. This is not true of all articles. Therefore, the question of making first-class butter is of the highest importance.

A GARDEN 60 or 80 feet square, securely fenced against rabbits and chickens, will yield an abundance of vegetables for the largest family, and an orchard of one-half acre, judiciously planted and cultivated, will give plenty of fruit for the same.

IT would no doubt pay farmers to test a patch of sorghum this year for fodder. There is nothing better than corn fodder, considering its cost, but sorghum is sweeter, and serves well as a change. It may be seeded down in drills, using a bushel of seed per acre. Cattle are very partial to it, and consume the whole stalk when it has been cut before becoming too dry.

SUGAR was once supposed to be a crop which could only be grown in the South, but Kansas produced nearly 1,000,000 pounds last year, and the area is being extended. Beet sugar can be produced in this section as well as elsewhere, and the time will come when it will be a special crop every year.

A HORSEMAN claims that feeding an idle horse much corn in winter is as hard on them as overworking them in summer.

THERE are two lines of work possible for the farmer to follow which bring cash returns every once or twice a week. These are dairying and egg production. In this respect they lay over every other feature of farm life. Ready money is something to be highly prized and the dairyman and the egg man knows its value. Good butter and fresh eggs will always be wanted.

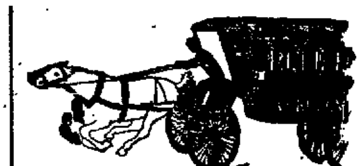
THE secret of always having eggs in winter is to have the pullets hatched early, so as to be fully grown and feathered before winter. Then with warm quarters and a mixed diet, you may reasonably expect good results in eggs. Hens after a year old make good mothers and setters, but not often very good layers. Keep young blood predominating in your flock, if you expect to produce eggs at a profit.

THE best mutton is of fine grain, a bright color, the fat firm and white. It is better for being full-grown. The meat of the ewe is not so bright, while the grain is closer.

THE deposit of eggs of the borer may be prevented by applying to apple and peach trees the following compound, proposed by C. V. Riley: Potash lye, one pound; fish oil, three pints; soft water, two gallons. Dissolve the lye in the water by putting it over a fire and heating to the boiling point. Then add the oil and boil the whole about two hours. Water is added to make up the evaporation by boiling and the result will be 25 pounds of soft soap, which will make from 50 to 100 gallons of trunk wash, according to the amount of dilution. The application of the wash should be most thorough, so that it enters well into the crevices of the bark.

FOWLS do better on mixed feeds. In different kinds of grains, vegetables, etc., are substances suited to the making of fat, muscle, eggs, etc.

A WRITER in Practical Farmer says it took him ten years to learn to grow strawberries, so that a good crop of fine berries could be depended on with reasonable certainty every year. The three principal reasons, he says, were varieties not suited to soil, lack of potash in the ground, and allowing the plants to stand too thick.



PROMPT RELIEF comes to the woman suffering from any of the painful disorders and derangements peculiar to her sex, if she accepts the help that's offered. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the only medicine so certain in its effects that it can be guaranteed. In every case, if it doesn't benefit or cure, your money is returned.

Beautiful women know how much they owe to good health. If you wish to be beautiful, keep the natural functions of the body in proper state and you'll be healthy.

A train of disorders follow the derangement of the womanly functions. For nervous prostration, excitability, fainting spells, dizziness, spasms, convulsions, or "fits," this remedy relieves and cures.

Take it when you suffer from sleeplessness, backache and bearing-down sensations, for the prompt relief it imparts.

The Value of Plant Food.

The use of fertilizers with the view of procuring them at the lowest cost is the object of all farmers, yet it is safe to assert that a majority of them buy more substances that they do not require than of those that are needful, because they have never attempted to test their soils. The garden is a suitable place to test fertilizers on different crops, as a greater variety of crops are grown in the garden, and also because only a short row may be devoted to each kind. It is well, however, to make tests on plots in the fields for staple crops, on ground that has not been so highly manured as the garden soil. Experimental plots teach the farmer which fertilizers to buy, and which will serve his purpose best, thus enabling him to select the most desirable substances and to avoid loss by rejecting those not needed.

On those farms where dairying is practiced and from which milk is sold daily a large proportion of the nitrogen and phosphates are sold with the milk, leaving the manure rich in potash, but deficient in the two substances named. If clover is made a special crop in the rotation, the greatest requirement of the soil will be phosphoric acid; but farmers make no allowance for what they already possess, and consequently purchase potash or that which may be temporarily dispensed with, and fail to supply the soil with phosphoric acid, which would balance the plant rations, give larger yields, and lessen the expense of the fertilizers. If grain crops are grown and sold the land will give up a large share of potash also, and certain crops will demand more of one kind of plant food than others. There is no way of arriving at a knowledge of what is lacking in the soil except to make practical tests with different fertilizers, using them singly, and in combination, on different crops.

Judicious use of fertilizers will reduce the cost by increasing the yield, as but little more labor will be required for a good crop than for one that is poor. Last year a fruit grower, on light sandy soil, in New Jersey, applied 50 pounds of a mixed fertilizer on one-eighth of an acre of strawberries (at the rate of 400 pounds per acre), the cost of the 50 pounds being 80 cents. He picked, during the season 500 quarts more than be secured from an ordinary plot of the same area, and of the same variety, which he sold at five cents a quart, or $25. The cost of the fertilizer in that case was but a trifle compared with the difference in yield. The crop that received no fertilizer succumbed to the drought, because the plants had an insufficient supply of food, and really produced but little, while the inferior berries sold at a sum that barely paid expenses. Farmers cannot afford to discard fertilizers unless they have a large supply of well-rotted manure, and nothing pays as well as plenty of plant food; but to buy fertilizers intelligently a farmer must experiment in order to learn just what his soil requires.—Record.

POCKET MONEY FROM POULTRY.—It does not represent any profit when the returns come in if the boy or girl or wife has borrowed or taken the feed from the farmer. Regular books should be kept in which the amounts spent for poultry and feed should be kept, and another book in which entries of returns for eggs and poultry sold are made. It may be necessary to start on borrowed capital—that is, to have the feed loaned to the poultry man on credit, but all of these accounts should be settled up when the money is obtained. It is only in such a way that one can really feel that he has earned the pocket money.—Ex.

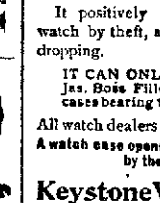
is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.



Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with Jas. Boss Filled or other watch cases bearing this trade mark—

All watch dealers sell them without extra cost.

A watch case opener will be sent free to any one by the manufacturers.

SHERIDAN'S Condition POWDER

Keep Chickens Strong and healthy; it gets your pullets to laying early; it is worth its weight in gold when hens moult; it prevents all disease, Cholera, Roup, Diarrhœa, Leg-weakness. It is a powerful food digestive. Large cans are most economical to buy.

NOTHING ON EARTH WILL MAKE HENS LAY LIKE SHERIDAN'S CONDITION POWDER

Therefore, no matter what kind of feed you use, mix with it daily Sheridan's Powder. Otherwise, your profit this fall and winter will be lost when the price for eggs is very high. It assures perfect assimilation of the food elements needed to produce health and form eggs.

It is absolutely pure; highly concentrated, therefore used in small doses; no other kind one fourth as strong. In quantity it costs less than one-tenth cent a day per hen. "One large can saved me $40; send six more to prevent roup this winter" says a customer. Sold by druggists, grocers and feed dealers. No other ever made like it.

If You Can't Get It Near Home, Send to Us. Ask First.

We send postpaid one pack for 25c; Five $1. One large can $1.20; Six cans $5, express paid. Sample copy of "the best poultry paper published," sent free. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., 22 Custom House Street, Boston, Mass.
